

FASHIONABLE WIFE PROTESTS IN TEARS

Mrs. Trautman, in Court, Denies Charge of Theft.

FACES MALE ACCUSER

Indignant Because Suspected of Such a Crime.

Arrested on Information from Peter Hagan, Who Said She Took His Pocketbook and $13, She Gets Case Adjourned—Husband Is Prominent Physician—Friends Come to Rescue and Furnish Bail—Has No Counsel.

New York, Dec. 25.—With her face tear-stained, and looking as indignant as a woman of five feet seven can, the beautiful wife of Dr. Alexander Trautman, of 389 Lexington avenue, was arraigned to-day before Magistrate Finn, in the Jefferson Market Police Court, to answer a charge of petit larceny preferred by Peter J. Hagan, of 129 East Twentieth street. Mrs. Trautman was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clark Scofield, of 131 West Twenty-first street. She had been arrested on Hagan's charge, made on Saturday, that she had stolen $13 from him in a hallway in West Thirty-fifth street. Mrs. Trautman was indignant, and her face showed that throughout the night she had been crying. She said Hagan would be sorry he had ever brought such an accusation against her, and that she had never seen the man in her life before last night, when she was arrested.

Finn was surprised that Mrs. Trautman had no lawyer. He looked first at the fashionably gowned woman in her long fur-lined coat and then at the small, not too well dressed complainant and asked: "Who is the defendant in this case?" "I am," answered Mrs. Trautman. "It is all a mistake, sir. This person accuses a wretched look was cast at Hagan, who seemed sorry he had come to court because he was afraid of her. I thought him a crazy person when he took hold of me, and tried to get away, but he told me he would punch me in the face if I made a move." The charge against Mrs. Trautman was handed to the magistrate by Policeman Gilligan, who had Hagan's statement, alleging theft, from him. Mrs. Trautman, although she had been indicted by $13 by Mrs. Trautman on Saturday night, he was positive in his identification, and said he would press the charge.

Gets Case Postponed. When Magistrate Finn was told that Mrs. Trautman had been unable to communicate with either her husband or lawyer, he said:

"Madam, I don't think you are a second Fortia and realize that the operations and happenings in police courts are unknown to you. You will not be able to cross-question that man who makes this charge against you, and it is allowed that you can ask to have this case adjourned until you can get your lawyer and have him appear here for you." "Your honor," answered Mrs. Trautman, "I know that I am not a Fortia, but I do not have to be. I can account for every minute of the time I have spent here in court, and the same way the face of it any one can see that this charge is preposterous. I was ill in bed at the time this person accuses me of having stolen his money." On the advice of several of the court officers and Mr. and Mrs. Scofield, Mrs. Trautman then asked that the magistrate adjourn the case until she could get her counsel and have her husband come to court. Magistrate Finn, who had been told by her friends, Mrs. Trautman asked that the case be adjourned until Thursday. "So be it," said the magistrate. "This case is adjourned until Thursday, and the same hall that was given in the police station is all right. I guess there is no fear of the lady not appearing."

SHIP CAPSIZES—THREE DROWN.

Terrific Storm Sweeps Cape Breton Island—Much Damage. Halifax, N. S., Dec. 25.—The Island of Cape Breton has been in the grasp of a terrific storm for the past three days, and enormous damage has resulted, particularly in the outlying districts. All railway traffic is tied up by washouts, and not a train moved to-day. Hundreds of section men are patrolling the roads. The greatest loss is in the interior. Three homes in the fishing district of Westport were washed away to-day by the drowning of William McDonald, Murray Gower, and Leslie McDonald, fishermen, who were on their way to the Banks. Their ship capsized, and they perished before their comrades could reach them.

That many were not killed is due to the fact that the train had slowed down as it struck the curve.

Divorcee Succeeds in Effort to Spend Christmas Here.

Denies Reports that She Contemplates Marrying New Yorker Soon—Met by Parents.

With the denial that she was to re-marry soon, and having traveled more than half way across the continent to take dinner with her parents, Mrs. Martha Highborn Blaine arrived in Washington last night, after securing a divorce from her husband, James G. Blaine, Jr., at Yankton, S. Dak. To enable her to catch a train to get here in time for the family reunion, Judge Smith held an evening session of court. Mrs. Blaine was met at the station by her parents, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Highborn, and several friends. She arrived shortly after 7 o'clock. The mother, father, and daughter were driven in a carriage direct to the family home at 1797 N street. A Christmas dinner was in readiness at the Highborn home. It had been planned while the daughter sped across the country looking forward to the stories which had been circulated in Washington recently to the effect that she was to marry a New York man. Other members of the Highborn family also deplored the marriage statement. ROB SOCIETY MAN'S HOUSE.

Two Daring Thieves Commit Bold Daylight Burglary. Jenkintown, Pa., Dec. 25.—Two thieves operated a daring daylight robbery this afternoon, when they gained an entrance to "Sunset," the country home of Clay Kemble, a prominent Philadelphia society man, at Church road and Glen-side avenue. They ransacked the house, getting a large amount of plunder. One of the thieves was captured later with hundreds of dollars' worth of clothing, jewelry, silverware, and other articles in his possession. The prisoner is now in the Jenkintown station house, and the authorities expect to have his companion late to-night or to-morrow. Until Mr. Kemble makes an investigation at his home, it will be impossible to tell the exact value of the stolen property. The prisoner under arrest claims his residence to be in Germantown.

READY TO STOP STOCK ISSUE.

Papers Completed for Injunction Against Great Northern. Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 25.—Attorney General E. T. Young has the papers practically completed for an injunction suit to prevent the Great Northern's $50,000,000 issue of new stock. It will be filed by the district attorney of Ramsey County to-morrow, and notice served on the company at once. An early decision of the question is desired, because the books will be open for subscriptions to the new stock January 4. The State's legal representative will ask for a temporary restraining order to hold back the deal until the case can be decided on its merits. The Great Northern is a Minnesota corporation, and so comes under the State law requiring railroads to get the consent of the State railroad commission before issuing new stock or other securities. The attorney general might wait until some of the stock has been issued, then move to forfeit the charter of the company for violating the State law, but that is considered a poor remedy, as it would be easy to organize in some other State, like New Jersey, and get beyond the regulations of the law of Minnesota.

MUST INDICT AT ONCE

Present Grand Jury Has Last Chance at N. Y. Life.

CASES SOON BARRED BY LAW

Jerome's Investigation Insurance Company's Affairs May Result in True Bills for Forgery This Week—Examination of Officers of Concern Has Been Thorough.

New York, Dec. 25.—The grand jury investigation of the management of the New York Life Insurance Company will be continued to-morrow, when District Attorney Jerome returns from Lakewood, Conn. It is expected that about one more session will be needed to finish up the particular phase of the New York Life management, which the grand jury has been inquiring into—stock deals with other companies. If any indictments are made, they will be filed with Recorder Goff, either Thursday or Friday. The indictments, if any, will be for forgery in the third degree.

Soon Barred by Limitation.

There is one interesting feature of the present investigation, and that is that unless indictments are filed by this grand jury, no other grand jury will ever have an opportunity, as the Statute of Limitations covering the particular class of transactions will have expired. It is said that these transactions either had their inception before 1901, or were completed thereafter, and the Statute of Limitations bars any prosecution.

Investigation Thorough.

The investigation has been a very thorough one. A number of witnesses have been examined, including George W. Perkins, who was vice president of the company; Edmund D. Randolph, treasurer; F. H. Shipman, assistant auditor; M. M. Mattison, a bookkeeper in the treasurer's department; Alexander Webb, Jr., who was secretary of the New York Security and Trust company, a subsidiary of the New York Life; Woodbury Langdon and G. A. Morrison, both of whom were members of the finance committee. From the offices that these men held in the company it is pretty plain that the investigation has covered all lines. All the evidence has been along the line of tending to prove falsification of books in order to conceal the true import of certain transactions. In order to have indictments against men high in the affairs of the company, it will be necessary to prove that they had knowledge of the entries that were made and gave orders concerning them.

GENERAL DANCES WITH COOK.

Philadelphia Social Leader Gives Conventional Friends a Shock.

Philadelphia, Dec. 25.—Gen. Edward De V. Morrell, who has, upon many occasions, led the cotillon at Philadelphia's exclusive assemblies, danced with his cook to-day in an old fashioned Virginia reel during a Christmas ball given in the cook's house on the Morrell estate at San Jose, Va. It is the former Congressman's yearly custom to give a dance at Christmas in good old style with all conventionalities thrown to the winds. Gen. Morrell's friends usually are interested spectators, and last year Miss Emily Hare, one of the season's prettiest debutantes, was his partner in the reel. This year, however, the general, with grateful recollections of many a fine dinner, insisted that Mrs. Bridget O'Connor, his cook, be his partner. Mrs. O'Connor blushing took her place beside the general, who, at the conclusion, gracefully assured her it had never been his good fortune to have a better partner for a dance.

STORY TOO SILLY, DECLARES FORAKER

Will Not Discuss President's Plan, as Published.

READY TO JOIN ISSUES

Information Given Correspondents at White House.

Ohioan Apparently Wishes to Force an Official Statement Concerning News Printed Sunday Morning. Has Been in New York, Supposedly to Confer With Constitutional League Officers on the Case.

"I think that the story about what the President intends to do is too silly to talk about, and you must excuse me from discussing it."

—SENATOR FORAKER.

Senator Foraker returned yesterday from New York, where he has been two or three days on business, which, according to the understanding in Washington, was connected with the case of the soldiers of the Twenty-fifth Infantry who were discharged without honor as a result of the Brownsville riot. It is said that the Senator conferred with officials of the Constitutional League, an organization which has conducted an independent investigation of the matter, and which has arrived at conclusions that differ radically from those of the President and Secretary Taft. Gluehlist Stewart is president of the league, Andrew B. Humphrey is secretary, and George H. White, formerly a member of Congress from North Carolina, is of its counsel. It is assumed that Senator Foraker's conferences were with these men. Senator Foraker was seen at his home last night, and his attention was called to the published stories of the President's determination to resist Congressional action looking to the restoration of the discharged negroes to the military service, even to the extent of welcoming impeachment proceedings against him. The Senator declined to say anything further than the following, which he carefully dictated: "I think the story about what the President intends to do is too silly to talk about, and you must excuse me from discussing it."

Apparent Challenge to President.

It will be observed that the Ohioan only characterized the published story as silly. If, however, the President's attitude was correctly outlined in that story, it would seem to be Senator Foraker's intention to make his characterization apply to that attitude as well. Apparently his purpose is to challenge the President to make some sort of a public statement in the premises.

Published Statements Inspired.

The information on which the publications of that day were based was imparted to four newspaper correspondents at the White House Saturday afternoon. Two of those correspondents represent the two journals which are the President's staunchest supporters among all the newspapers of the country. It is assumed that Senator Foraker was cognizant of these facts when he dictated the statement here given.

Character of New Evidence.

It is understood that some of the new evidence which Senator Foraker will cause to be presented to the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, in the event of the adoption of his resolution directing an investigation of the case by that body, is in the form of letters written to the wife of an army officer in Washington by the wives of officers who were stationed at Brownsville when the trouble occurred, and prior to that time. The writers of these letters are said to have asserted, in effect, that the people of Brownsville were of such a character as to make it necessary for the women of the post to practically make themselves prisoners in their quarters, because they feared to go about the streets of the town.

Statements of this sort have already been denied, with considerable indignation, by Texans who say they are thoroughly conversant with conditions in Brownsville. It is admitted that the town contains some "toughs," being located directly on the Mexican border, as it is; but all suggestions that the townspeople are not as peaceable and as civilized as those of any other community of similar size in the country, are emphatically repudiated.

The Democratic Attitude.

Considerable interest is manifested in the attitude of the Democrats of the Senate toward the Foraker resolution. So far they have not participated in the discussion of the Brownsville case in any way, and it is understood that this policy of aloofness will be continued unless the situation undergoes a material change. Most of the Democratic Senators apparently take the view that they are not called on to interfere in a quarrel which, up to this time, has been confined to the Republican side of the chamber.

Senator Tillman has been quoted as asserting that he thinks the President did an injustice to at least some members of the discharged line.

But he has had nothing to say on the floor of the Senate. Senator Bailey, whose plan it is to return to Washington shortly after the reconvening of Congress next week, and who is expected to indicate the Democratic position, by virtue of his acknowledged leadership of the minority, has been quoted in an authorized interview as upholding the President's action.
